

Conscience

Our Conscience, beholds like a mirror;
All our actions, both good and bad
Conscience is the divinity, none is greater than Him.
When the conscience is lightened, the world is illumined.
Keep this mirror clean, lest it should get dust

The Buds of happiness and the thorns of miseries,
Solely depend upon our Conscience.
Nothing can be hidden from Him,
For Conscience has thousands of eyes.
One can escape the world but not Conscience.

The Wealth of body is like a slanting shadow,
But the assets of Conscience, priceless.
Let not this priceless riches role in dust,
For the sake of transient body.
Those who ignore the voice of Conscience,
Waste their precious lives in vain.
